Murray Trans. NECF. Cited Caldwell Catalogue 1911-1912 pp.96-97, which reads
"1911; price 75¢." RSSUD 1904b [1].

Note: According to Caldwell's 1911-1912 Catalogue this edition "has a handsome rubricated title page and duograph frontispiece. The bindings of this series is the unique feature. Bound in an original style, with Veneer sides in different shades reproducing the exact grains of the oak and ash, Cloth backs, contrasting to shades of the wood sides. Embossed gold cover designs enclosing a dainty bit of scenery or figures representing the seasons of the year, which are done in polychrome, made expressly for the series. Sides and backs are stamped in gold with gold titles." (p.96). The ad shows 3 pictures of two cover designs. The first cover design (shown in the first picture) has a wide frame border (with an internal decorative 'wood' grain design and a large gold-outlined splayed leaf in each of the four corners); within the top $\frac{2}{3}$ of the outer frame is an inner wide-gold outlined frame (with a small solid gold splayed leaf in each corner) against the 'wood grain' cover background; this inner frame contains a full color pasted picture; above the picture (within the inner frame's top) is "Alcazar Classics" (gold letters); spaced below the inner frame is a wide gold-outlined horizontal rectangular panel (against the cover background) containing the book title in gold letters. The Miriam Snow Mathes Collection (State University of New York, Albany) holds two examples of this cover: (1) A Child's Garden of Verses (a brown & green wood-grain cover design with a pasted picture of a man with a fly fishing rod standing at a lake, a field of flowers in the foreground and two large trees in the background; the spine is dark green cloth) & (2) Pilgrim's Progress (reddish brown wood-grain cover design with a pasted picture of a blossoming tree (apple blossoms?) in a field, foreground LFT, with a house roof showing in the immediate background, RT; the spine is reddish brown cloth).

Collection (State University of New York, Albany) holds two examples of this cover: (1) Tales from Shakespeare (reddish brown wood-grain cover design with a pasted picture of a woman, from head to shoulder, facing left, wearing a rounded blue hat with linear gold decorations toward the back of her head; she wears a brown blouse (or dress) with a bright blue shawl draped over one shoulder, and has flowing brown hair; she is against an almost black background; the spine is reddish brown cloth) & (2) Paul and Virginia (green background cloth with the pasted picture of an outdoor field with two rows of a simple horizontal-board fence in the foreground; a large bush or tree runs from the middle up the right side; the field continues beyond the fence, with a large mountain in the background, the clouded sky filling out across the top; the spine is green cloth, the same shade as the cover).

Note: "Pinocchio" is divided into two sections: "The Wonderful Puppet" (Pinocchio is carved and runs away from home), and "The Land of Toys" (Pinocchio goes off to the Land of Toys – and ends when Pinocchio has been changed into a donkey). This seems to have been especially translated and adapted for Heath; the terms "Land of Toys" and "Romeo" do not appear in any of the four preceding translations. Possibly these were written by Emma K. Goldman, herself.

Endps: s.a. 1911d. Ftpc: B&W, a long line of natives (3 abreast in front) queuing to do obeisance before the comfortably seated Pin, a native guard behind him (alongside a large tom-tom, bot LFT), in a native village, Copeland (+ 3 f p B&W ilus + 70 pt p B&W ilus, Copeland). TP: B&W, pat after 1904f; dec with Pin on a large rock across from water’s edge (LFT, below title), looking at an open-mouth crocodile staring at him and lifting out of the water (mid RT); an ostrich & 2 palm trees are to the RT of the title. TPV: prt mk “811.4” (i.e., April 1911). Preface (unsigned) v-vi; Contents vii-viii; text beg p.1. School ed. Src: Library of Congress (cdcp); Miriam Snow Mathes Collection (State University of New York, Albany).

Note: Translation of Eugenio Cherubini’s Pinocchio in Affrica (1903). A tale of simple adventure that narrates the kind of mishaps expected of the unredeemed puppet. Its portrayal of black Africans is a demeaning caricature expressing views common at the time. Today the book would more correctly be understood as unabashedly racist, belittling African peoples to serve the fantasy required by the story being told. According to Ginn’s records, this is more an adaptation of Cherubini’s novel than a direct translation.

Note: This book, intended as a companion volume to 1904f, was distributed to the lower grades in elementary school, and was reprinted continuously up through the early 1950s. It did not go out of print until 1953, according to Ginn.

Note: Angelo Patri, here cited as the principal of Public School No.4 (the Bronx, New York City), later became a prolific writer of books for parents on children and their proper education. Indeed, he was well known for his progressive views on education (cf., James M. Wallace: The Promise of Progressivism: Angelo Patri & Urban Education). Furthermore, as this bibliography shows, he also made a small career out of Pinocchio (indeed, as have I).
